Managing pharmacy benefits requires seamless claims processing, end-to-end oversight of financial, clinical and operational workflows, and full transparency with no hidden agendas. Built Modern, Not Modernized

RxLogic was built cloud-native from day one, not migrated from legacy mainframe or client-server code. That distinction matters. Legacy adjudication platforms carry decades of technical debt that slows every enhancement, every integration and every compliance mandate. RxLogic's architecture delivers elastic scalability that absorbs claim volume growth without re-platforming, capacity planning exercises or performance degradation at peak and a compliance-ready foundation engineered to absorb regulatory change, such as the NCPDP F6 migration, as configuration and standards work rather than architectural overhaul.

Your System, Your Rules: Configuration Without a Change Order

Most platforms make clients open a ticket and wait in a vendor queue to change a copay tier or update a network. RxLogic puts that control directly in your hands. Changes take effect on your timeline, not a vendor's release calendar, and because the platform is transparent by design, every configuration is visible, auditable and reportable, so what you set is what adjudicates.

How RxLogic Is Different

As an independently operated technology platform, RxLogic is not a PBM. We do not retain rebates, steer claims or monetize spread pricing. Our only role is to support your strategy, giving you full control over plan design, data access and vendor relationships with no competing interests

Beyond conflict-free operation, RxLogic stands apart in four ways:

- Proprietary, owned technology. RxLogic owns and develops its entire technology stack in-house, including the platform, data exchanges and network relationships. There are no white-labeled components and no licensed third-party adjudication engines. When clients need a change, our engineers make it, not a vendor's.
- Implementation as a discipline. RxLogic runs a structured, repeatable implementation methodology with dedicated governance, defined workstreams and a formal stabilization period before transition to Client Success. Clients know exactly where they stand at every phase.
- Full-service or unbundled. Clients adopt RxLogic as a complete end-to-end solution or select only the components they need. Claims adjudication, rebate administration, financial reconciliation through the PayRec platform and network access can each stand alone or operate as an integrated whole.
- Total cost optimization. Beyond unit price, RxLogic helps clients optimize the full economic picture: administration fees, rebate arrangements structured as Collected Administrative Fees, and discount card program economics.

As the pharmacy benefit landscape faces growing legislative scrutiny and public demand for transparency, RxLogic positions your organization for both internal accountability and external compliance.
